Background

Geographic Information Systems (GIS) are an important tool in the planning for public health services. Office of AIDS Programs and Policy (OAPP) staff have been developing maps using GIS technology since 2004. These maps have been used in conjunction with other data sources to evaluate HIV prevention and treatment services in Los Angeles County. In addition, OAPP has been working collaboratively with the Public Health GIS Users Group (GISUG) to share information and best practices. As a result, OAPP has developed a number of maps showing various HIV risk factors by geographical area as well as the location of HIV service delivery sites. The maps, developed by Planning & Research Division, have been included in this book. The book will be updated regularly as new maps are available.

Each map document represents an available map layer and can be overlaid with other layers upon request using the OAPP Planning & Research data request form. For example, HIV prevention service delivery sites can be overlaid with HIV positive tests by zip code. Maps drawn to show the entire boundary of Los Angeles County may not have labels for small features such as service delivery sites or geographical areas including zip code and census tract number when printed on letter size paper. However, the resolution of these features will display on larger sized documents such as presentation posters. Further, smaller geographic areas can show more detailed features including site labels. These data are available upon request. All map documents include a legend and data source and are drawn at 1:600,000 scale.

General questions regarding OAPP GIS and mapping activities should be directed to Mike Janson, Planning & Research at mjanson@ph.lacounty.gov. Specific data requests can be obtained by completing the OAPP Planning & Research data request form available on the intranet.
